#SaySomething

The service will offer an anonymous reporting mechanism for young people via 116 000 which will support and safeguard. The helpline will offer signposting and/or refer young people to relevant local services.

Missing People will send disclosed information about child sexual exploitation to relevant statutory agencies and will expect an appropriate local safeguarding response.

The charity will also help the person reporting to be safe, and access support where needed.

Workers can share the Say Something helpline with young people who aren't able to be fully open about what is happening, so they can report their worries anonymously.
